

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention is a process for making a gradient material using a screw extruder system having material input conditions, operating conditions, and hardware element configurations and introducing disturbances into at least one of the material input conditions, operating conditions, or hardware element configurations so that a gradient material is formed by the screw extruder system.